A Massachusetts man is suing his sweetheart for $10,000 damages because she married another fellow. She weighs 300 pounds, while he weighs only 105. Perhaps she realized the disparity between them and crawfished in time. We don't blame her. She sized him up right. The man who would value a 300 pound sweetheart at only $10,000 is too small to weigh more than 105 pounds.

What there is in little things is illustrated by an object lesson which comes from Brussels. The public school children were requested to pick up the odds and ends found on the streets. From January 1st to October, 1895, they picked up stuff enough of different kinds to clothe 500 poor children and send ninety more to recuperating colonies.

Hon. James M. Smith, of Oglethorpe, Ga., is pretty considerable of a farmer. He has just marketed his 2,000 bales of cotton, last crop, for which he got $70,000, and cotton with him is only a side crop. He raises lots of other stuff.

Senator Morgan declares that Cuba's freedom "is written on the stars." Rhetorically speaking that may be all right, but our opinion is that as a matter of fact the machete operators would rather have it a little closer.

AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

Gloriana to Be Presented Friday Night —In Aid of the Shelter of the Cross.

For a number of years past the King's Daughters of this city have been maintaining a most worthy charity, the "Shelter of the Silver Cross," a home on the sea shore, where many of the sick poor of the city are cared for during the hot Summer months. There is not a more commendable charity than this, and every one interested in such good work should not fail to witness the performance of the three act comedy "Gloriana," which will be presented at the Opera House Friday evening for the benefit of the Shelter, by a select company of home artists. The play is one of the laugh-a-second-order, and never fails to bring tears, pure and simple, and of perfect enjoyment to the eyes of the on-lookers. The piece made quite a successful run in New York and other large cities, and is considered one of the best of pieces. Of the ladies and gentlemen who will present the comedy there is nothing to say, for their talent in the theatrical line has more than once been most creditably displayed before our theatre-goers. During the action of the play, pleasing specialties will be introduced. Admission 50 cents, but no extra charge for reserved seats.

TRUCKING INDUSTRY.

The East Carolina Association—Responsibilities and Duties of Its Shipping Master.

The office of shipping master is a new one in these parts and creates a number of duties more or less unusual, but Mr. H. T. Bauman, lately elected shipping master of the East Carolina Truck and Fruit Growers' Association, has begun his duties with a zeal and business experience that promises well for the effectiveness of the office.

The shippers of truck have seen all along that it would be of great advantage to have an experienced man to devote his entire time to the interests of all, and as the source of the greatest loss has been the glutting of markets and the consequent fall of prices, the duty which principally occupies the attention of the shipping master is to distribute the crop in such way as to prevent, so far as possible, the over-charging of any of the markets.

To accomplish this end, of course, it is necessary in the first place that the shipping master keep parties advised on the condition of the Northern markets, so that a considerable portion of Mr. Bauman's time is taken up in assorting and estimating on daily telegraphic reports, giving stock on hand, receipts, etc. He is also obliged to keep informed every day as to the probable shipments on the following day from the different points in which he operates. This information he obtains through the local agents of this association.

It is not practicable here to give all the details of Mr. Bauman's methods, but what has been said is sufficient to show that in the position of shipping master he is capable of operating in no small degree for the advantage of fruit and truck farmers and that it also involves some considerable work for the man who holds the position. Mr. Bauman tells us that there are fully 700 truckers whose interests he has to watch. The territory covered embraces Wrightsville, the Wilmington & Weldon road as far as Goldsboro, and the Wilmington, Columbia & Augusta road, including Chadbourn, Florence and Sumter Some of the principal shipping points besides those just mentioned, are Mount Olive, Rose Hill, Wrightsville, Wallace, Burgaw, Faison, Warsaw and Rocky Point.

The expense incurred in employing a shipping master and keeping him supplied with the necessary telegraphic information? That is scarcely felt by the individual trucker, as there are so many to share the burden The funds come from the sale of shipping tags. And a very neat and attractive one is in use for strawberries, bearing the name of the Association and the officers, Mr. W. L. Hill, of Warsaw, President, and Mr. D. H. Haraly, of Chadbourn, Secretary. Each of these tags costs the truckers one cent. There is another tag for use of packages of other truck, costing one-half cent.

Mr. Bauman has his headquarters at the old Seacoast ticket office, on North Front street near the A. C. L. passenger depot. He is assisted by Mr. Edward Peschau, Jr.

The city market was abundantly stocked with vegetables yesterday. Besides the regular varieties, such as kale, spinach, lettuce, celery, etc., there were new Irish potatoes, the first of the season, and new English peas. A Native Artist.

Mrs. M. McD. Williams (nee Mary Lyde Hicks), of Faison, N. C., is rapidly making a reputation on her work in oil portraits and tapestry. The Washington, D. C., Evening Star says: "Mrs. Williams, of North Carolina, a pupil of Mr. Fisher, has recently painted a piece of tapestry entitled "Love and Music," which is greatly admired by all who have seen it. At the Newbern Fair Mrs. Williams was awarded first premium on her exhibit in oil portraits, tapestry and pastelles, and has been invited to send her work to the Woman's Exposition of the Carolinas to be held in Charlotte during May. An oil portrait of the late Mr. John D. Williams, of Fayetteville, is considered by all who have seen it as near life-like in expression and coloring as possible to be.

The Olive Canning Factory.

The Olive Canning Factory will commence operations July 1, and that it may be sure of having plenty of tomatoes, Mr. S. J. Jones offers to furnish plants for $1 per thousand to parties who will plant tomatoes for the Olive factory. Now is the time to set out plants, and those intending to plant will do well to see Mr. Jones at once.

The Big Snow Storm of April 15, 1848.

The notice in the STAR about the heavy snow of forty-nine years ago caused several of its readers to ransack their memories in verification of the statement. Among those of our citizens who have a vivid recollection of the incident is Mr. W. T. Bray, Mr. Bray was at the time overseeing for Col. T. D. Meares, at Meares' Bluff. He tells us that the snow, accompanied by a cold east wind, began about 12 o'clock on Saturday night, April 15th. All day Sunday, off and on, it continued, until the ground was covered to the depth of from four to six inches, and on the verge of Easter it was twelve and fourteen inches long hung from the eaves of the houses. The snow storm naturally did a great deal of damage. Sixty acres of corn on the Meares' plantation was killed outright, and but for Mr. Bray turning the water on the large fields of rice in cultivation, it too would have been destroyed. The shrubbery and trees which under the influence of an early spring were in full bloom, received wounds from the biting weather which they show to this day.

But the snow storm was not without its good effect. At the time a peculiar specie of worm was playing havoc with the pines of this section by extracting the sap from them and very materially lessening the yield of turpentine. The exceedingly cold weather must have frozen these pests, for they never gave any more trouble after the great snow storm of '48.

Can't Get a Quorum.

It looks as if the Republican Board of Aldermen are destined never to meet. A special meeting was called for last Friday night, but only three aldermen —Messrs. Keith, Hewlett and Norwood —besides Mayor Wright, were present and consequently no meeting was held. Mayor Wright then issued a call for a meeting yesterday morning at 11 o'clock, but only the three aldermen present Friday night and Alderman Walker put in an appearance; so no meeting was held yesterday. The absentees are Aldermen Benson and Green, both from the Fifth Ward.

Mayor Wright states that the object of the called meeting is to award the contracts for lights, lime, etc.

It is rumored that Mr. Michael Griffin, elected by the Board as captain of police, will soon tender his resignation.

Police Court Proceedings.

Owen Dove, colored, was arraigned in the Police Court yesterday, charged with an assault with a deadly weapon. It is alleged that Dove is the man who shot Mr. Nathaniel Failes Friday night at Mr. C. F. VonKampen's bar, corner Fourth and Church streets. Messrs. D. D. Cameron, Robert Burriss and Jno. W. Hewett testified that Dove looked like the man that did the shooting, but would not swear to his identity. Dove stated that he didn't know anything about the shooting. The case was left open until to-morrow morning at noon, in order to hear the evidence of Jake Wilson, colored, who was in the bar at the time of the difficulty.

Wilson says that he is not acquainted with the man that did the shooting or his partner; that the two men merely happened to enter the bar at the time he did.

Superior Court.

Only two cases were disposed of in the Superior Court yesterday.

Simon L. Hight, administrator, vs. W., N. & N. R. R. Co. Judgment, $300 and costs for plaintiff.

Nearly all of the day was taken up in the hearing of J. Davis, receiver, etc., vs. L. Vollers, et al. Testimony was taken up to 4 o'clock, after which argument was heard from Eugene Martin, Esq., and Geo. Rountree, Esq., for the plaintiff, and Marsden Bellamy, Esq., and E. K. Bryan, Esq., for the defence.

The following issue was submitted to the jury, which they answered in the affirmative: "Were the note and acceptances embraced in the settlement between the Bank of New Hanover and Adrian & Vollers on the 27th of February, 1893?"

At 6.35 o'clock Court took a recess until 10 o'clock Monday morning, when the quo warranto proceedings brought by and against Wilmington's various mayors and board of aldermen will be heard.

Easter Decorations.

Messrs. Rhodes & Bowden had their stalls, numbers 2 and 4 at the Front street market, beautifully dressed with Easter decorations yesterday. Myrtle bush, bamboos, dogwood in bloom, cedar and roses were arranged in a very tasteful way, making a splendid contrast with the rich red of the splendid variety of meats which Rhodes & Bowden keep constantly on hand. To Mr. John C. Hintze, the popular manager of the stalls, belongs the credit of having planned the decorations. Some of the choice meats on sale yesterday were veal, lamb, poultry, pork, sausage, roasting-pigs and all grades of beef.

The Gun Club.

The Wilmington Gun Club held their regular shoot yesterday afternoon at their grounds near Hilton. There were eight entries and the shoot was hotly contested. Each contestant shot at twenty-five targets, and the four gentlemen who broke the largest number were Mr. Fred. Pearsall, of Magnolia, 10; Mr. S. W. Sanders, 19; Mr. H. McL. Green, 16; Mr. E. G. Polley, 16. The Club holds its shoots every Saturday afternoon, and the occasion is always looked forward to by many with a great deal of pleasure.

Private Stockholders May Refuse to Meet with Russell's Directors—Other Raleigh News—Asylum Cases Before the Supreme Court.

[Special Star Correspondence.]

RALEIGH, N. C., April 17.

It is generally believed that the private stockholders of the North Carolina Railway will refuse to meet with Russell's directors on the 7th of May, the time set for the next meeting. At that time Dr. Norment will be elected President of the road. Dr. Norment says that no action was taken yesterday because it was decided best to first notify the private stockholders that the Board would meet. If the private stockholders refuse to assemble with the new directors then the Board will go ahead and do the best it can.

The Asylum cases will be argued before the Supreme Court to-day. Logue Harris says that he hopes a decision will be rendered Thursday. He wants the matter settled one way or the other. Some Republicans here say that Judge Adams is trying to appear in a non-partisan role.

The independents in city politics have used to advantage a manufactured story that the Democratic nominees in some of the wards, Mayor Russ and some other nominees, would vote to further restrict the liquor traffic in the city. So persistently has this story been circulated that the Democratic committee decided it best to issue a statement setting forth that this was not a prohibition fight, and that the Democratic candidates for aldermen have no intention of restricting the liquor interests. Otho Wilson will support Mayor Russ in preference to Stronach, the independent candidate for Mayor. The past administration was a strong one, and its policy is being heartily endorsed.

BEET SUGAR.

There is a growing interest in this country on the subject of beet sugar, an interest not confined to any particular section, for preparations are being made in several States where no beets have thus far been grown to enter upon this industry. New York in the East, Florida in the South, and Wisconsin and Iowa in the central West will be added to the few States that had previously entered upon it.

It is said that the interest being so widely manifested and the increasing number of sugar factories is causing concern to the magnates of the Sugar Trust, who see in the beet sugar prospectively a most formidable rival which will have many advantages over it, one of which will be in the number and distribution each supplying with its product a large section of country, of which the factories will be the center, thus covering in the aggregate a large territory which is now supplied by the Trust, which has to buy its raw sugar and import much the largest part of it.

The probabilities are that in self-defence the Trust may be compelled to turn its attention to beet sugar itself, which would give a stimulus to the industry and help the more rapidly to develop it, but there is little danger of its monopolizing that as it has monopolized the cane sugar business, for it would have too much territory to cover and too many factories to absorb, as the factories will continue to increase from year to year as the culture of the beet expands.

As this is a subject in which there is such a growing interest, and desire to know something, we herewith reproduce an extract from an article in a recent issue of the New York Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin. After stating, on what it calls reliable sources, that the Sugar Trust is not interested in any of the beet sugar factories now in existence, it says:

It is understood that special efforts are to be made to make the growth of sugar beets an important industry in Florida in the near future. Thus far sugar factories are in operation in California, Nebraska, New Mexico, Utah and Virginia, and new factories are approaching completion in New York State, Wisconsin and California. Following is a list of the present factories and the factories in course of construction, as compiled by Messrs. Willett & Gray:

FACTORIES IN OPERATION.

Name.	Location.
Western Beet Sugar Co.	Watsonville, Cal.
Chiay Beet Sugar Factory	Chino Valley, Cal.
Alameda Sugar Co.	Alvarado, Cal.
Norfolk Beet Sugar Co.	Norfolk, Neb.
Oxnard Beet Sugar Co.	Grand Island, Neb.
Eddy Beet Sugar Factory	Eddy, N. M.
Utah Sugar Co	Lehi, Utah.
O. K. Lapham & Co.	Staunton, Va.

NEW FACTORIES APPROACHING COMPLETION.

At Rome, N. Y., factory formerly in Canada.

At Menominee Falls, Wis. (Wisconsin Beet Sugar Co., Milwaukee, Wis)

At Alamitos, Cal. (the Alamitos Sugar Co., Los Angeles, Cal.)

At Salinas City, Cal., proposed by Mr. Claus Spreckels.

PRODUCTION OF BEET SUGAR.

The following figures show the growth of the beet-root sugar industry in the United States, from its first inception in 1830, when but a few hundred pounds were made, to the present time, when 40 000 tons are manufactured:

1830—A few hundred lbs.	1888—585 tons.
1831-7—None.	1894—958 tons.
1838-9—1 800 lbs.	1895—600 to s.
1840-69—None	1896—60 tons.
1863-71—300 to 500 tons per annum.	1897—*25) tons.
1872—800 tons.	1898—1,910 tons.
1873—700 tons.	1899—2,800 tons.
1874-7—Under 100 tons per annum.	1900—5,359 tons.
1878—900 tons.	1900—12,021 tons.
1879—1,800 tons.	1902—30,458 tons.
1880—500 tons.	1904—30,448 tons.
1881-3—Less than 500 tons.	1905—30,000 tons.
1881-5—Less than 500 tons	1906—*40,000 tons.

*Estimated.

"The estimated consumption of all sugar in the United States is placed at nearly 3 000,000 tons It is obvious, therefore, that beet sugar is not a very important part of the production. Nevertheless, the idea is general in well informed sugar circles that the production is bound to increase with rapid strides each succeeding year, on account of the growing interest of the agricultural classes in this direction. In addition to the entrance of Florida as a sugar producer, already noted, a movement is on foot to establish beet sugar factories in Oregon.

* * * * * *

Mr. Willett, of Willett & Gray, who has recently been making a study of the beet sugar situation, said yesterday when questioned by a representative of this journal:

"Beet sugar is so well understood now and the fullest directions can be so easily obtained that by the proper selection of seed, adapted to a special locality there need be no difficulty about the production."

"If beets in sufficient quantities were grown," Mr. Willett was asked, "is it practical to establish factories for reducing the product of sugar in the raw state, with a conveniently located central refining plant or is it necessary, in order to make the venture successful, to secure sufficient acreage in one locality to compel the erection of a plant complete for reducing and refining?"

"Factories for making raw beet sugar can be built at moderate cost, compared with a plant for refining, and the raw product can be sold, at market value, to any refiner in the United States, including the American Sugar Refining Co., who are ready to purchase such sugars at the same parity as other sugars cost them. As a plant can be run only a few months out of the twelve I would not think it advisable to invest in a refining plant, which would have to compete with the regular refineries on the seaboard and be at great disadvantage. There are, however, on the market one or two processes of making granulated sugar direct from beet juice, which I would desire to investigate before making a definite answer to your question."

"What minimum capacity for a successful plant can be provided as regards a plant for refining only?"

"The cost depends upon the capacity. For a small raw sugar house $125 000 may be mentioned for a moderate farming district up to $600,000 for a large plant, including refinery. As the plant must remain idle a good part of the year a moderate cost at first is best, and can be added to if successful. Cheap fuel and plenty of cheap lime are important considerations. Factories in Nebraska use about 1,500,000 gallons of water per day in working 800 to 850 tons beets.

* * * * * *

"Our study of the United States beet sugar industry leads us," he added, "to favor many and moderate raw sugar plants, somewhat on the plan of the creameries If enough of these are stated in a State then a central refining plant might be added, but we think the present refineries would take all the raw sugar made, and freights of the raw product to refineries need not exceed the freight now paid on foreign importations of raw supplies."

It is a little surprising to learn that beet sugar was made in this country as far back as 1830, and it is not the less surprising that so little progress had been made up to 1888, when the industry began to show some visible signs of existence. It is encouraging, however, to see that since then it has been making continuous progress, while the rapid growth attained within the past four or five years gives promise of even greater growth in the future, especially since the area of beet culture is as yet confined to so few States, and the acreage so small. Another encouraging fact is that the industry is not confined to any one section, but has been or will be entered upon in the North, South, East and West, where the experimental plants will doubtless be followed by others as they have been in the few States where the ventures were made years ago. These pioneers have blazed the way, and so fully demonstrated what can be done that it is no longer a matter of experiment. The only question in it is securing a sufficient quantity of beets to warrant the erection of working plants. That secured the rest is merely a matter of the capital to erect the plants, for the product of which there is a sure and a constant market at home, without long hauls or shipping abroad.

With the practical experiments to be made in Virginia and in Florida, we will have a pretty fair test of the South's capacity to produce the beets, and a pretty safe guide for other States, for if the culture succeeds in both of these States there will be no question of its success in the States lying between, if there ever was any question as to that.

We are interested in this because we believe that it will some day become a great industry in this country and especially in the South.

MINOR MENTION.

When greed makes demands it never listens to reason, and never thinks of anything but itself. Greed is at the bottom of the whole protective tariff system as it has been enforced ever since the first Republican tariff, until the Wilson tariff, and even in that concessions had to be made to it. There is no excuse for taxing the necessaries of life, when the needed tax can be raised from something else, but greed doesn't mind this, nor care how heavy the burden it may impose on the masses of the people, provided the profits come to it. There is no excuse for taxing coal, or wood, or hides, for these are all necessary to the comfort and health of the people, and every movement to make them dearer is a blow at comfort and health. It would be just as reasonable for the farmers of the country who supply the towns with firewood to ask for a duty on wood, as it is for the coal miners, the wool growers or the butchers to ask for a duty on coal, or wool, or hides. We import very little coal, very little wool that is grown in this country, and very few hides that this country can supply. The coal imported is in those sections where it cannot be supplied from our own mines. The bulk of the wool imported is coarse wool that is not grown in this country, where it would not pay, but it is necessary in the manufacture of carpets, &c. The bulk of the hides we import are heavy, used for making soles, for which American leather is too light, and goat skins which are not found in any considerable quantity in this country. We don't cultivate the goat to any large extent. If it were possible to see any benefit to be derived from taxing either of these three necessaries, the evil so overshadowes the good that the proposition is simply monstrous, and one that would not be entertained for a moment by any man not under obligations to the people who demand the tax and unscrupulous enough to discharge the obligation regardless of the gross injustice done to the millions taxed to discharge these obligations.

* *

Mr. Blumenthal, of New York city, is in trouble, and the more he thinks about it the bigger the trouble grows. Mr. Blumenthal is a thrifty denizen, who deals in buttons and other things, and the trouble came about in this way. When it became apparent that the Dingley bill would increase the duty on buttons he, like a good many other thrifty gentlemen who bought big stocks of goods abroad in anticipation of the increase of duties, concluded that he, too, would take time by the forelock, as it were, and ordered five cases of metal buttons, worth $589.52, on which the duty under the Wilson tariff is $206.33. Under the Dingley tariff the duty will be $3,653.43. Ordinarily this would be a nice little transaction and would leave a margin for a handsome profit. But here the trouble comes in. Old man Grosvenor, oblivious of the fact that he was making trouble for Mr. Blumenthal and others, popped up and had that retroactive clause hitched on to the Dingley bill, which if it pans out will put Mr. B. in for $3,446.10 more tax than he counted on when he imported his buttons, which clips just that much out of B.'s profits, who has ever since been in a frame of mind to cuss the buttons off of the Ohio Congressman. It is somewhat annoying, Mr Blumenthall thinks it is very annoying, and a decidedly outrageous piece of business to thus come between him and his profits, but he at least has the consolation of standing a pretty good chance of seeing the retroactive business scratched out by the Senate, or knocked out by the courts, if it should get that far.

Alabama is building up a pretty large iron trade in Europe, and to do it she is competing with the world. Much of this iron goes to England in competition with English mines and has to bear the cost of transportation across the ocean. Alabama iron makers are not asking for any protective duty on iron, and they don't want it. Southern cotton mills are shipping cotton goods to China and are doing it in competition with the world, with the looms of New England and the looms of Old England, which has had almost a monopoly of the China cotton goods trade. Recently the Piedmont and Pelzer mills, in South Carolina, shipped twenty car loads of cotton drill to Shanghai, 2,500 bales, worth $100,000. To afford to ship these goods such a long distance the price must have been considerably under the English prices, which shows that our Southern mills are pretty well able to take care of themselves in competition with the manufacturers on the other side. Southern cotton manufacturers are not asking for protection on their goods. They are attending to business and letting others do the howling for protection.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE.

— Sanford Express: In 1864 a coal mine was opened near Carbonton, in Chatham county, upon a search for coal fit for use on vessels running the blockade at Wilmington. This mine has just been purchased for $25,000.

— Monroe Enquirer: One of the provisions of the dispensary law for Monroe is that half the profits of the dispensary is to go to the graded schools if they are established, otherwise to go to the public schools of the country.

— Lincoln Journal: An eastbound freight train on the Carolina Central Railroad about 2 o'clock Monday afternoon struck a man near the Beal Fill, four miles from Lincolnton, and inflicted injuries which caused his death Tuesday night. The man was sitting on the end of a crosstie asleep.

— Goldsboro Argus: In the assault case, spoken of yesterday, from the Eureka section, in which a white man, Jesse Cox, was defendant, that has been engaging the attention of the court for two days, the jury this afternoon brought in a verdict of guilty, and Judge Adams sentenced the defendant to the penitentiary, at hard labor, for 15 years.

— Warrenton Record: A colored man and horse were instantly killed last Friday morning by lightning at Mr. Spooner Harrison's, in Halifax county. The man was in the field plowing, and, at the time he and the horse were struck by lightning, he was moving his measure for running off corn rows. Mr. Harrison had just a moment before the stroke left the spot where the man and horse were killed.

— Elizabeth City Economist: Currituck is a great county. It was the Keystone of the Democratic party for years and is so still. It produces the finest ducks, and geese, and swan, and snipe, and bull frogs, and the oldest men in North Carolina, and the most stalwart, heartiest, healthiest men in the State. And now to all these products it adds a product of a fat boy 13 years and 6 months old who weighed on April 6th 436 pounds. His name is Lewis T. Lewark. He has 10 brothers and sisters whose weight ranges from 180 to 250 pounds. His parents are under medium size and weight; his ancestors were sometimes fat people, showing that qualities skip children and reproduce remote ancestors.

— Morganton Herald: On last Sunday night Avery Myres, who has been filling the position of engineer at the Deaf and Dumb School here, and Emma Snipes, who has been an employe of that institution, left together for parts unknown. They were last seen here sometime Sunday night at the depot, but did not buy tickets from the railroad agent. Telegrams for their arrest were sent both east and west Monday, but so far they have not been taken. ——Myres has a wife and three children living in Morganton and an aged mother and father who have been dependent upon him for a support. Emma Snipes is about 17 years of age, unmarried, and is a daughter of Laith Snipes, an attendant at the State Hospital and a good citizen.

SOME DAY.

MRS C. E WHITON-STONE.

Some day, beloved, when I have learned to bear
And know as absolute thine absence here,
And have grown used to silence and the drear
Monotony of days without thy care,
I shall reach higher than this sharp despair
And so be glad for thee that thou canst hear
The mighty music of a mightier sphere,
And then I may find healing unaware—
Ah! when that day shall come my soul may rise
To abnegation as supreme as thine,
And I shall clamor heaven no more with sighs,
But ready thy heart's new record, line by line;
How dare I not be glad who know thine eyes,
Are lifted radiant to the eyes divine?

—— It is very interesting to note with what rapid strides some of the silver countries have risen in the esteem of the goldites since they have decided to abopt the gold standard. —— By the Hawaiian reciprocity treaty we lose over four and a half millions per annum in the duty on sugar alone, and that under the present tariff. FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

PLAYED BALL IN COURT.

A Little New York Boy Who Was Unconscious of His Condition.

The policemen in Jefferson Market court could not maintain strict order, for, while Magistrate Deuel signed commitments for a large assortment of disorderly characters, they allowed one youngster to do just as he pleased. He was 4-year-old Willie Phelan, and he was in court with his grandmother, who asked to have him committed to a charitable institution. Willie's mother is dead, and his father is a helpless cripple.

Willie had a little rubber ball, and, with a merry laugh, he threw it when and where he pleased. First it was a policeman that caught it and returned it to him, then it was a prisoner. Again and again he pitched it here and there.

Just as the boy threw his ball at a burly prisoner, arrested for writing policy, and the latter kicked it back with a smile, Magistrate Deuel signed the papers which sent the child to St. Joseph's asylum.—New York World.

A Pretty Experiment.

Take a poker in the hand and point it to the north, dipping it to the horizon at an angle of about 30 degrees. Give the poker several sharp raps upon its higher end with a hammer. This will cause vibration in the molecules of iron and the poker will become faintly magnetic. The best test for a weak magnet is a needle floating on water. Perhaps you do not know that a needle may be made to float, but it is very simple. The needle must be dry and the water still. Then, if the needle be laid upon the surface flat, it will float readily. Now take the poker and hold it close to the needle and you may draw it all over the saucer, but the poker must not touch the water. If it should, it would raise by adhesion a little hill of water all about it, down which the needle would slide, thus producing a deceptive effect of repulsion. Real repulsion instead of attraction may be secured by rubbing one end of the needle on one end of the poker.—Philadelphia Times.

A Little Girl's Letter.

Recently Queen Victoria received a petition from a little girl which was quite irresistible in its way. The letters addressed by unknown persons to the queen do not usually meet her eye, as their number is great and their character often indicative of unsound minds, but the epistle from this child the queen's secretary deemed worthy to be brought to her attention.

It began thus: "Dear Queen—I let my doll fall into a hole in the mountain, and as I know that the other side of the world belongs to you I wish you would send some one there to find my doll."

The little girl believed the hole went clear through the earth and that the queen could easily have the doll hunted up on the other side.

The queen was much amused at this petition, and though she was unable to grant it she could send a new doll to the little girl, and this she proceeded to do.

A Twelve-year-old Duchess.

An interesting little personage is the Archduchess Elizabeth, the 12-year-old daughter of the Crown Princess Stephanie of Austria. While staying in Steirmark, a pretty Austrian village, she wished to make friends with the children and take part in their games. Her mother offering no objection to the plan, she joined them one day and asked if she might play with them. The result was, as might have been expected, a westruck silence and a gradual edging away from her little royal highness. Elizabeth was much distressed and said pleadingly, "I am only a little girl, and I want to play with little girls." Finding them still ill at ease, she got them to sit to her in turn, while she made sketches, and thus the shyness gradually wore off. The next day, and during her stay, she romped and played with the village children like one of themselves.—New York Times.

Horses.

In an old book written at the beginning of this century a man who had a great deal to do with horses makes an assertion which one would like to see verified. He says that while a horse always lies down in its stall to sleep, if the groom, as sometimes happens, lies down there first and falls asleep, the horse never disturbs him, but invariably stands patiently all through the night and allows the man to slumber peacefully, no matter how near the horse's legs he may be or how tired the animal. Another interesting point about horses is the way they are trained to become showy, high stepping animals. A horse that steps high, you know, presents a very dashing, spirited appearance. He is trained to do this and to act showily by being driven along a path on which rails are set crosswise. He steps high to avoid stumbling, and in time always steps high.

Lord Leighton a Painter of the Beautiful.

It may perhaps be stated as the distinction of Lord Frederick Leighton among his peers that he has worshiped beauty, and especially the beauty of form, more exclusively than they. There is little or nothing of the mystic to create beautiful images. Often beauty is their sole motive. Sometimes they clothe a beautiful idea, sometimes they present a fine dramatic scene, but in all cases the treatment is essentially aesthetic, whether the subject be the face of a woman or some tremendous theme like "Hercules Wrestling With Death" or "Rispah Defending the Dead Bodies of Her Children." No violence is sufficient to make his draperies fall in ungraceful folds. No passion will disturb his features to disfigurement. With the pathos of deformity his art has no concern, and it has little toleration even for strength without refinement.—Cosmo Monkhouse in Scribner's.

Something to Know.

It may be worth something to know that the very best medicine for restoring the tired out nervous system to a healthy vigor is Electric Bitters. This medicine is purely vegetable, acts by giving tone to the nerve centres in the stomach, gently stimulates the Liver and Kidneys, and aids these organs in throwing off impurities in the blood. Electric Bitters improves the appetite, aids digestion, and is pronounced by those who have tried it as the very best blood purifier and nerve tonic. Try it. Sold for 50c or $1,00 per bottle at R. R. BELLAMY'S Drug Store. †

Gloom

Of ill health, despondency and despair, gives way to the sunshine of hope, happiness and health, upon taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, because it gives renewed life and vitality to the blood, and through that imparts nerve strength, vigor and energy to the whole body. Read this letter:

"Hood's Sarsaparilla helped me wonderfully, changed sickness to health, gloom to sunshine. No pen can describe what I suffered. I was deathly sick, had sick headaches every few days and those terrible tired, despondent feelings, with heart troubles so that I could not go up and down stairs without clasping my hand over my heart and resting. In fact, it would almost take my breath away. I suffered so I did not care to live, yet I had much to live for. There is no pleasure in life if deprived of health, for life becomes a burden. Hood's Sarsaparilla does far more than advertised. After taking one bottle, it is sufficient to recommend itself." MRS. H. A. ARCHER, M.D., 111 So. Oxford Str., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"The use of Castoria is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach."

The Best 1897 MODEL
BICYCLE.

Your Choice of Any of the Highest Grade $100.00 Bicycles, 1897 Model, Free of Cost by Using Some of Your Spare Moments.

The great strides made by THE NEW YORK TIMES within the last few months form a notable chapter in American journalism. During a period of general business depression THE NEW YORK TIMES has made steady progress, having within six months nearly doubled its circulation. This growth, while indeed gratifying, serves only to stimulate the management to greater efforts. With a view to the introduction of THE NEW YORK TIMES in homes where it is not now received, where the improvement that has been made may not be known, a plan has been devised to reward those who may assist in the work of increasing its circulation by offering to any man, woman, or child any one of the standard high-grade one hundred-dollar Bicycles, 1897 model, if they will secure one hundred (100) new subscribers for THE NEW YORK TIMES each for three months—$3 if delivered by carrier; $2.50 if sent by mail. That no effort to increase the circulation of THE NEW YORK TIMES may go unrewarded to those who find they cannot secure more than fifty subscribers for three months each, the choice will be given of any fifty-dollar (retail price) bicycle, American manufacture, and to those who in their efforts fall short of fifty subscribers there will be paid 50 cents in cash for every subscriber less than fifty.

Remember you can have your Choice of any Bicycle of American Manufacture.

THE OFFER IN DETAIL.

Any person desiring to undertake the work of securing 100 subscribers should notify THE NEW YORK TIMES, and full instructions and blanks will be furnished. Under no circumstances will a subscription be accepted as making up the number required of any person who has been a regular reader of THE NEW YORK TIMES since Jan. 1, 1897. All lists will be investigated, and if it is found they include the name of any person who has recently been a regular reader, that subscription will not be accepted to make up the list of 100.

It is distinctly understood that all lists of names are subject to verification. All copies of THE NEW YORK TIMES ordered under this plan must be delivered where THE TIMES has not heretofore been received. The offer is intended solely for new subscriptions, and orders from present regular readers of THE NEW YORK TIMES will, under no circumstances, be accepted in making up the required number.

Orders for the delivery of two copies to the same address will not be accepted as two new subscribers. The purpose of THE TIMES is to obtain a wider distribution of its issues in homes where it has not heretofore been delivered.

PLAN OF WORK.

Make up a list of your relatives, friends and acquaintances, only those to whom you are well known. Give their full name and Post Office addresses. When you have the number, write or send to THE NEW YORK TIMES office for that number of letter circulars and subscription blanks. Address and sign the letter circulars inclosing addressed envelope for reply, (THE NEW YORK TIMES will supply them.) Send the signed and addressed letter circulars to THE NEW YORK TIMES, and they will be mailed without cost to you; if you mail them yourself you must affix to each letter a two-cent stamp. By this means you may, without calling in person on your friends, earn your choice of any one-hundred-dollar bicycle.

It is necessary, of course, in order to successfully participate in this work, to have an adequate conception of what kind of a newspaper THE NEW YORK TIMES is. If you are not a reader of THE TIMES, secure a copy, read it carefully, and thus become acquainted with its merits. You will see that THE NEW YORK TIMES is a decent, dignified, enterprising, first-class newspaper. It has always maintained a high standard; it has always stood for what is best in the community; it is not sensational; perpetrates no fakes, and is free of "fears;" it presents what occurs impartially, fully, and in a manner to interest intelligent men and women. To be seen reading THE NEW YORK TIMES is a stamp of culture and respectability. The story is told of a young man who, when applying for a situation, and asked for reference by his prospective employer, answered simply, "I read THE NEW YORK TIMES." He was accepted in the employment at once on the theory that reading a newspaper of the quality of THE NEW YORK TIMES is a certificate of good character.

A FEW FACTS.

A large part of the population of Greater New York consists of men and women of culture and education who scrupulously exclude from their homes sensational newspapers. They want a pure, wholesome newspaper, which, while progressive and entertaining does not desecrate its pages by repulsive details of scandals and horrible accounts of crime. There is a growing protest against those newspapers which pander to the depraved, and which inflame the minds of the weak-minded and unthinking by overdrawn tales of vice and immorality. The best men in the community are calling a halt on this vicious tendency, and THE NEW YORK TIMES is daily pointed to as an example of what a self-respecting, modern newspaper should be. Secure a copy of the Saturday edition and observe the Supplement, devoted to a review of books and art. Show this to your friends who are readers of the best literature, and they will be interested at once in the attractive contents of this feature. The illustrated Magazine Supplement which accompanies the Sunday edition is a gem of art and literature. It compares favorably with the best ten-cent magazines. A knowledge of these facts will enable you to properly present the merits of THE NEW YORK TIMES to prospective subscribers.

Things worth having are not easily obtained. It requires earnest effort and untiring persistence to secure 100 subscribers and you may find for the first day or two that the effort is not as easy as you may imagine, but perseverance will surely bring success.

If you desire additional information, write to THE TIMES. All questions will be cheerfully answered. This is a rare opportunity to secure your choice of any of the best one-hundred-dollar bicycles. Sample copies of THE TIMES sent free upon application. Address

OFF FOR DANCING SCHOOL.

[These words can be sung to the Elizabethan air, "To all you ladies now on land," etc.]

We started off for dancing school,
My sisters twain and I.
The night was lovely, clear and cool;
The moon was in the sky.
I wore a gown of sarcenet blue,
And Madge and Kitty had them, too,
For to trip and to skip
And to skip and to trip
And be merry all the glad time through.

The girls were pranked as gay and bright
As peacocks in their pride.
The parson's Rose was all in white,
Most like an April bride;
Her sister Nell in gown of green—
Good lack! She thought herself a queen—
For to trip and to skip
And to skip and to trip
And be merry all the glad time through.

The lads in corner huddled close,
Just like a flock of sheep.
Beneath their lids at Nell and Rose
They scarcely dared to peep.
But yet, "How fair so e'er they be,"
Methought, "there's one will come for me,
For to trip and to skip
And to skip and to trip
And be merry all the glad time through."

The master tapped his fiddle bow
And bade us rise to dance.
The girls stood perking in a row,
All waiting for the chance.
And up comes Ned with beck and bow
And says, "Will be my partner now
For to trip and to skip
And to skip and to trip
And be merry all the glad time through?"

I dropped my curtsy wide and deep
And gave to Ned my hand.
Pit, pat, my feet the time did keep
The while we took our stand.
Then ting, tang, to, the notes did play,
And Ned and I set quick away
For to trip and to skip
And to skip and to trip
And be merry all the glad time through.

Now, hop, hop, hop, we all did go;
A slide and then a bounce,
And Rose flew by, a wreath of snow,
And Nell did flaunt and flounce.
"But best," cried Ned, "I like the blue.
And, oh, there's none of them all like you
For to trip and to skip
And to skip and to trip
And be merry all the glad time through!"
—Laura E. Richards in Ladies' Home Journal.

THE WANDERER.

There was a presage of a storm. Masses of blue black cloud hung over the sunset. The wind wailed and died and died and wailed. In the roadway rusty leaves leaped suddenly to the air, eddied and swirled, strove to unite with the tree that had cast them, shivered in the dike. At the fringe of the cloud there was a star.

A stile had been fixed at the turning of the road. It had three bars, and also a step to cross by. On either side the hedge grew thickly, and there also two trees, like guardians, gaunt in the horrid light. So the stile was picturesque. But it had its uses. On the farther side there stretched a path across the meadow. It led to the old house that had stood among the beech trees through generations. From the stile you could see the turrets above the tree tops. The inheritor, of the name of Dalrymple, the squire, lived there. If you followed the road, you would also come to the hall and enter by the great gate. But the pathway was nearer by far.

On the side of the pathway, in the angle where it joined the stile, there lay a pond. In the district thereabout it was looked on as a place of ill omen, and back to a time out of mind the children of Dalrymples had passed it at nightfall with speedy steps and eyes asslant. Yet not to folk learned in lore, but to the weirdness of the place itself, should you go for the reason. The trees grew close to the margin and met overhead, save only in the center, where the banks were widest. If a stranger should take a stone and hurl it to that point, he would get in return a tone so deep and resonant as well might make him wonder. Now the trunks creaked and whined, and the wind whistled in the branches. And the shadows were black on the pond.

A man was seated on the stile. His back was to the road, and his eyes were fixed upon the turret tops above the trees. He had come upon a journey. You could tell it from his boots. He was hungry. You could tell it from his eyes. Such a man indeed as one would pass upon the farther side of the road and be glad to get rid of toward evening. What hangs to the feet one vaguely calls "boots." With him it was scraps of leather. And how thin he was! Through the rents in his garments there peeped out angles as sharp that the coldest, if he saw them, could scarcely withhold his pity. At the points they were lacerated by thorns, but the blood had congealed and lay matted thickly with the dust of travel. His hands were like claws. Long, sinewy, toil stained, they protruded shamefully from his rags, and, clutching the rail upon either side, kept him fixed on his narrow perch.

There is a penury that chills the blood. It was in the face of that man. Course, tangled, thickly clotted with dust, his hair hung loose and rank upon his shoulders. A scanty growth of unkempt beard, streaked and tinged with gray, bristled from the lower portions of his face, as weeds grow sparsely on an arid soil. His cheeks were so hollow that the bones stuck out like the knuckles on a man's clinched fist. The color of his skin had come, through time and a sameness of treatment, to accord with the dull, coarse brown of his hair and his clothes. His eyes—lusterless, deep sunk in the sockets, stained at the margins with blood, weary, wild—gazed at the turrets of the hall. I have seen such a look upon the face of a starving dog.

The wind wailed in the branches, and the clouds massed in the west, but the man sat still upon the stile. But when those who were hurrying from the storm came by he moved to let them pass. Yet ever he dropped upon the side that was farthest from the hall. Such as were women eyed him askance and such as were men with wonder. But not a soul passed him a salutation. So the man remained, and the birds cried out for the storm. Then two maids returning to the hall came to the stile and tossed their heads, resenting that he should soil with his clothes the rail which their skirts must touch.

Yet the stile was his own. Nor the stile alone, but the grass at his feet, and the great house at the end of the pathway, and the broad acres that pressed it round. There were warmth and good cheer at the house. Still the man moved not. Had the journey been long, and did he linger to rest at the stile? Or did he wait there for some one who tarried?

Then there came the prattle of children's voices in the road. They babbled merrily as their nurse pressed them on from the storm. And they passed the man by. Then their voices ceased, and their feet sped faster still, and many a frightened glance they cast behind them as they walked and hurried again. So they heeded not the pond. But the man watched them wonderingly. And he saw a laborer approach along the pathway, returning from his work. The pipe he smoked glowed warmly, and the man shivered. But at the stile he spoke to the laborer, and his voice was hoarse, as one that is seldom used.

"What children are those?" he asked.

The workman stopped abruptly and looked at the man in suprise. He wondered at the questioner, I doubt not, and maybe he wondered at the question.

"Them?" he said at last in a strong, broad accent. "Them's the squire's bairns."

"But I thought that the squire was an old man?"

"T'owd squire? Why, bless your life, 'e's been dead this ten year."

There was a pause. And then the man said:

"So these are children of his eldest son?"

"Noa," said the workman, "it winna be the eldest. 'E wanted 'is brother's gal, and 'cos she would a nowt to say to 'im 'e went away i' sulks. And 'e never come back no more. Aye, that was 20 year ago!"

"And what became of him?"

"Aye, bless your life, 'ow should I know? E's dead, they say."

"And the brother married the lady?"

"Aye, that 'e did."

There was silence, for the man was gazing at the turrets. The laborer was about to move away. But the man stopped him with another question.

"And are they happy, those two?"

"'Appy?" Again the workman seemed amazed at the question. "Why, it's beautiful to see 'em. Aye, often and often when they passes i' the road wi' the bairns, a-going to church mebbe, or mebbe not, the missis she says to me, 'Jim, it's a picture,' she says, and I says to 'er, 'It is,' says I. 'Appy?" And the workman smiled.

But the man at the stile was silent. From the heavens there shot a jagged streak of light. For a moment it lit up the faces of the two men; then the darkness had fallen like a pall. And the workman laid his hand upon the shoulder of the traveler.

"Look 'ere, stranger," he said, "I don't know 'oo you be, or where yer come from, or what yer doing 'ere, but you seem a civil sort, and I'll tell you this: We're going to 'ave such a night as not many i' these parts 'll remember the likes on, and if ye'v' got a place to go to don't you wait no longer, but make tracks, and if you 'aven't, why come yer ways along o' me."

The stranger seemed moved, but he replied: "I thank you. You are very kind. I have shelter from the storm." As he spoke his eyes were trained across the stile. So the laborer passed on his way. And the storm gathered. Thunderous clouds loomed densely overhead. The air was thick and pressed upon the brow. A great bird rose from the rushes at the pond's verge and shrieked to a surer refuge. The wind dropped.

But the man lingered. And over in the meadow, on the pathway, there appeared a light. It drew nearer and swung gently to and fro. The traveler saw it was carried in the hand of a man walking. He was clad in a coat that was lined with fur, and his face was soft and white. At the stile he saw the man. He frowned and would have passed, but the stranger stopped him.

"Mr. Dalrymple," he said.

The other raised his lantern till it shone in the face of the man. He shuddered slightly and again would have passed on his way. But the traveler stood before him, so that the path was closed.

"Mr. Dalrymple," he repeated.

"By what right do you bar my way?" The tones were quiet, but imperative, as of a man accustomed to receive deference. "And why do you call me by name?"

"I have news of your brother," said the man.

"He is alive?" The words were said gladly, but there was a gulp at his throat when he spoke. The man saw the gulp.

"He will never return," he replied.

"By what means," said the squire, "can I tell that you speak with authority?"

The man put his hand beneath his rags and drew forth the faded photograph of a woman. On the back there was a name written. He passed it to the squire.

And the squire looked at it. And he turned over and read what was written on the back. Then he raised his hand and uncovered his head. And he said to the man, "May I keep this memento?" And the man nodded.

"What you tell me," he said quietly, "is only that which necessarily I have always understood. Nevertheless, the confirmation grieves me deeply." There was real sorrow in his voice. And that, too, the man noticed. "Did my brother leave no message?"

"He spoke much of a woman," said the man.

"Can you tell me her name?"

"It is Marianne."

The squire was silent. Then softly, "Poor fellow," and again, "Poor fellow," to himself. "It is my wife of whom he spoke," he said to the man.

"I trust she is well," said the man.

"She is very well. I left her but now with the children."

As he spoke the first heavy raindrops fell from the clouds. They were ominous of the storm to come. On the water in the pool they pattered softly.

"I fear," said the squire, "you have traveled far and are weary. It is possible you are at a distance from your home, and there is a terrible night before us. The rain has already begun. You may hear it on the pond. Will you not go to the hall for some rest and refreshment?"

"I thank you," said the man, replying in almost the words he had used to the laborer. "I have all I need." And again his eyes seemed to gaze into the darkness beyond the stile.

There was the sound of a rumble of wheels on the road, and two lights shone out through the dimness. The lights brightened; the sound cleared; a brougham and pair drew up at the turning.

"My carriage meets me here," said the squire, "and I am somewhat pressed for time. But you have laid me under a deep obligation. Is there no way in which I can serve you?"

"There is one," said the man. "I should like to shake you by the hand."

The squire hesitated. It was only momentary. But a flush rose to the hollow cheek of the stranger. "It is my hands," he said. "I will wash them in the pond."

But the squire had drawn off his sealskin glove, and he held out his soft, white palm. The other clutched it in his bony hand, and for a moment the eyes of the two men met in the light of the lamp. The squire started and released his grasp. There was a look in his face that held something of fear. When he entered his brougham, the look remained still on his face.

And the man sat again on the stile. In the darkness the lights from the hall shone brightly, and he gazed at them. Then he turned his eyes to the trees that were dim round the pond and again from the pond to the lights. Was there happiness at the lights? Was there peace in the pond? So the man crossed the stile. In the hush before the storm there was a great cry. It was a cry of despair, yet a cry of hope, of joy.

The squire heard it and stopped his brougham. The laborer heard it as he entered his cottage and lingered at the door till his wife called out for the draft. The children at the hall heard it as they sat at tea and dropped their spoons askance, listening to hear it again. But the trees at the pond bent closely, the circles melted away, and the storm burst.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

When the Earth Was Top Shaped.

After people dropped the old fashioned idea that the earth was as "flat as a pancake" they did not immediately grasp the globe of spherical idea as it is applied to worlds. The people of the time of Columbus believed that the earth was a body shaped like a top or cone, the surface rising from the north to the south. There are several letters written by Columbus and still in existence which go to prove that such was his conception of the shape of the earth. The top shaped idea of the earth seems to have originated with one John Blauvis about 1479 and to have immediately become very popular.—St. Louis Republic.

SUNDAY MORNING. APRIL 18, 1897

EUROPEAN WAR NEWS

The Absorbing Topic in Official Circles in Washington.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The news of the crisis in the Cretan situation was the absorbing topic in official circles here to night. The expressions were general that the United States could not be drawn into the conflict, and that the course of this country was plain in preserving strict neutrality. It was felt on all hands among officials that the real gravity of the announcement was in the prospect that it would serve as the spark to start a conflagration through all Europe.

Secretary Sherman was seen at his residence to-night and shown the bulletins. "It is no surprise to me," said the Secretary of State, "as recent events have seemed to make war inevitable, and I have expected that result to come. Fortunately the scene of the reported conflict is far from us, and the United States has little or no concern with the war. We will, of course, observe the strictest neutrality as between the parties. This is a natural result from the conditions prevailing and will require no specific declaration of neutrality. Our commercial interests with Greece and Turkey are very small, so that there is no ground for disturbance in that connection. Last year our exports to Greece amounted to only $639,737, an insignificant sum, barely one per cent. as compared with the total exports. Turkey exported to the United States $3 619,000 last year, showing a similar lack of important commercial dealings between the United States and Turkey. Tnat being the case our commercial, geographical and political isolation from these countries leaves us quite free from any possible entanglement in the conflict."

Mr. Sherman's attention was called to the reports some time since that the United States warship Bancroft might be sent as a guardship to the United States Minister, Mr. Terrell, at Constantinople, and the Secretary was asked if the war was likely to renew the occasion for a warship in the Golden Horn.

"There has been no talk of that of late," said he, "and I see no occasion for any change in affairs. The news to night in no way changes the status of our Ministers to Turkey or Greece. Their rights and immunities are in no way limited and their official position gives them asylum against all disorder. Except in the profound regret our people will feel that two nations are involved in war, we can be in no way involved in the conflict."

Senator Davis, chairman of the Senate committee on Foreign Relations, read the news with great interest, and in response to a request for a statement said "The attitude of the United States will of course be one of neutrality and a strict observance of treaties. The war can have little direct effect on us as our interests are so small in this part of the world. But it is of profound importance to Europe, and I fear it might be but the first step toward a conflict involving all Europe. It is almost certain to result unless a quick and decisive victory is achieved on one side or the other."

The Turkish minister, Moustapha Bey, received the report of the Associated Press at the Turkish legation to-night and read with great interest the dispatches from Constantinople.

The minister is hopeful that an outbreak may yet be avoided, although he fears that the incursions of the Greek irregulars across the Turkish border may compel Turkey to take action. He is emphatic in his statement that Turkey is exhausting every possible means of averting war.

Representative Hitt, chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs during the last Congress and the undoubted chairman of the new committee, read the early dispatches from Constantinople and then commented briefly on the situation. "In the event of war," said he, "the duty of the United States will be plain to maintain neutrality and see that our treaty obligations are maintained. The sympathy of our people will be with Greece in this struggle. Compared with Turkey she is weak in military resources. But the Greeks are strong beyond their borders and there is a large Greek population within Turkey."

CIVIL SERVICE LAW.

Bill Introduced in the House to Compel Persons Now in Office to Pass Examinations.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Representative Grosvenor, of Ohio, who made a vigorous attack on the civil service laws in the last Congress, to-day introduced a bill to declare the true intent and scope of the civil service act. The bill declares that the civil service act shall not be construed to embrace any of the employes in the Government Printing Office or the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, nor any person employed merely as workman or laborer, nor construed to allow the appointment to office or promotion in any classes of the civil service covered by the act of any person who has not passed a competitive examination or is shown to be exempted from such an examination, and all appointments since March 4th, 1893, without a competitive examination, unless such appointees are specially exempted, are declared illegal and contrary to the intent and spirit of the act. The bill proposes that all persons who have been employed or appointed in the classified service since March 4th, 1893, without examinations, shall appear before the Civil Service Commission for examination within ninety days, the examinations not to give them preference over other citizens who are qualified to enter the service. This bill would compel all those now in offices over which President Cleveland extended the shelter of the civil service act to pass examinations.

GRECO-TURKISH WAR.

FORMAL ANNOUNCEMENT MADE BY THE TURKISH GOVERNMENT.

Turkish Military Commander-in-Chief Ordered to Assume the Offensive—Greek Troops to Be Kept On the Defensive—Fighting Continues On the Macedonian Frontier—An Unexpected Movement On the Montenegrin Border.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

ATHENS, April 17, 10 p. m.—Orders were sent this afternoon to the Greek troops to keep strictly on the defensive, but to maintain their positions at all costs.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 17,—A detailed circular sent this morning to the Turkish representatives abroad recalls the week's invasions, and states that the newest incursion was participated in by the Greek troops which, therefore, established war. The circular expresses the hope that the Powers, in a spirit of justice, will agree that the entire responsibility for the war falls on Greece. Turkey has no idea of conquest, and as a fresh proof of pacific sentiments offers to retire her forces from the frontier and from Crete.

ATHENS, April 17.—A telegram from Larissa, dated 4 80 Saturday afternoon, says that firing is still proceeding, and that the cannon firing can be distinctly heard.

It is reported as this dispatch is sent that the Greeks have occupied three Turkish stations and that the Turks are retreating. Crown Prince Constantine, the Greek commander-in-chief, and Gen. Macoris, were up all night dispatching orders to the front.

No further news has been received from Macedonia regarding the movements of the Greek irregulars. The weather is bitterly cold in the mountains.

Dispatches just received from the Greek headquarters at Larissa confirm the report that an engagement has taken place near Nezeros, in Thessaly, on the frontier near Mount Analipsis, between the Turks and the Greeks. It is further stated that the Turks were the aggressors, having attacked a Greek advance post. A Greek corporal was killed and a Greek sub-lieutenant was wounded. It is understood that the forces engaged belonged to the regular armies of the two countries, although this is not positively stated in the dispatch.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE GREEK ARMY, IN THESSALY, LARISSA, April 17.—Details of the fighting between the Greeks and Turks at Nezeros, just within the Greek frontier line, in Thessaly and south of Mount Olympus have been received. The fighting originated, according to the Greek reports, in an attempt upon the part of the Turkish forces to occupy an abandoned post of the Greeks. The movement was opposed by the Greek forces, whereupon the Turks opened fire and a sharp engagement, lasting four hours ensued. The Greeks eventually retreated. Their losses are not known. This engagement occurred yesterday.

At 5 o'clock this morning heavy firing between the Turks and the Greeks near Nezores was resumed. The Greeks, in the meanwhile, had been reinforced with artillery, which they brought into play upon the Turkish post at Kotroni. The latter was eventually destroyed with dynamite.

[Copyright 1897 by the Associated Press.]

HEADQUARTERS OF THE TURKISH ARMY IN MACEDONIA, ELLASSONA, April 17.—8 a. m.—News has reached here that a Greek band has attacked the Turkish troops at Karya, northwest of Nezeros. A Turkish officer and two men were wounded.

As this message is forwarded the fighting continues and a council of war is sitting here, under the presidency of Edham Pasha, the Turkish commander-in-chief.

SALONICA, April 17.—A battalion of Albanians stationed at Uskub, in readiness to start for the Greek frontier, has been sent in haste to Verana, on the Montenegrin frontier, and another battalion, now in course of formation, will follow as soon as possible. This unexpected movement of Turkish troops toward the Montenegrin frontier has given rise to the report that serious danger is apprehended in that direction.

LONDON, April 17.—Easter being the great festival of the Greek Church, it was hoped that actual hostilities, since the reported failure of the raid of the insurgents into Macedonia, would be postponed until next week, especially as the concert of the Powers having failed in everything else, succeeded beyond all hopes in holding back Turkey from plunging into war, while proving to Greece that Turkey is still able to mobilize an enormous and efficient army.

Whether this is a good omen for Europe and for civilization, it has certainly had the effect of making Greece hesitate; but trade is at a standstill in both countries and the people are already suffering. Greece is spending about $100,000 daily in the support of her armies and Turkey is probably spending three times that amount. It is impossible for this state of things to continue much longer.

A dispatch from Sebastopol says that four large steamers there have been converted into armed cruisers and they will be sent to join the fleet in the Dardanelles. Large quantities of French shells and cartridges arrive by every steamer, reaching the Bosphorus from Marseilles. Among the Greek volunteers arriving from all parts of the world, eight yesterday arrived at Kallabka from New York, Rochester and Chicago. They joined a force of irregulars.

The Roman Catholics of Greece and Crete are trying, through their priests, to get the Pope to intervene in Turkey and Greece, seeing that the Powers have failed, in order to prevent war. But it is said his Holiness is not inclined to interfere.

The Princess of Wales from Copenhagen, is making arrangements to have nurses sent from London to the frontier of Greece.

ATHENS, April 18.—Midnight.—In spite of the fact that official reports indicate that firing on the frontier ceased at mid-day, a telegram from Larissa at 7 o'clock in the evening says that firing continued past four o'clock this (Saturday) afternoon. The line of fire extended from Mount Analipais to Klephtike Gentekia, a distance equal to ninety minutes' march. The Turks, falling back, abandoned several stations, which the Greeks promptly occupied. The Greeks cannonaded the Turks from the Greek position at Tsamteja, in the rear. The cannonading caused much excitement at other points. Since noon strong bodies of the Turks have concentrated in the direction of Mount Analipais. At 5 o'clock the firing slackened. It is expected that the Turks will attempt a night attack upon Analipais, which was the central point of the battle. Greek reinforcements have arrived, and there is a general movement of troops toward the frontier. Reinforcements are being hurried toward the frontier from all directions.

ATHENS, April 18, 1 a. m.—An official dispatch from Larissa, dated at 9 o'clock last (Saturday) night, says that the Turks, under cover of darkness are assaulting the Greek forces at Mount Analipais, with great fierceness. The Greek resistance, so far, has been magnificent and spirited.

The Greeks still maintain their positions. The firing began at Critsovali, with an attempt of the Turks to occupy a strategic position in the neutral zone The Turks continue to abandon their advance posts, and a general movement is apparently taking place. Firing is reported from Molusa. From Larissa the flashing of guns can be seen. In yesterday's fight at Analipisis the Greeks lost forty wounded and three killed.

ATHENS, April 18, 1.30 a. m.—The Cabinet has decided to protest to the Powers against the aggressive action of Turkey. An invasion by Edhem Pasha, the Turkish commander, is expected and the Greek army has taken up positions for the purpose of being in readiness to repel the advance.

LONDON, April 18.—A dispatch to the Observer from Athens says that four Russian officers who refused to bombard the insurgents on the island of Crete were tried at Sebastopol and acquitted. The Russian crews threatened mutiny if the bombardment was undertaken.

GEN. GRANT'S BODY.

It Was Removed Yesterday to the Imposing Monument Designed for Its Last Resting Place.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, April 17.—The body of Gen. Grant was removed this afternoon from the temporary tomb which has sheltered it for nearly twelve years to the imposing mausoleum which is designed to be its permanent resting place. There was no elaborate ceremonial and beyond the attendance of a guard of honor, the removal was accomplished without special incident. The interest of the public in the event was attested by the presence of several thousand people, although the hour for the removal had not been previously announced.

Col. Frederick D. Grant arrived at the tomb at 2.55 o'clock, accompanied by his son, U. S. Grant, third. Directly in front of the temporary tomb a sort of rough frame addition, a rootless inclosure had been constructed, and Col. Grant and those directly interested in the event gathered there. The iron gate of the little tomb was at once opened and the undertaker's men began work.

The cover of the steel case which had held the casket was removed last Tuesday. This cover had been held in place by several scores of rivets, and a great deal of time was required to remove it. The first work to-day was to remove the lid of the cedar box. There were four wreaths and a sheaf of wheat on this lid. There they had been for nearly twelve years, but they were in a remarkably good state of preservation.

Directly on top of the casket and inside the lead casing was a neatly plaited wreath of oak leaves. Col. Grant, who was in the outer enclosure, had asked for this several times, and when it was reached it was lifted out carefully and wrapped up. Col. Grant explained that his daughter Julia, then a little girl, had made the wreath herself at Mount McGregor.

As soon as the casket had been lifted out, the cedar box was carried over to the mausoleum. The casket was placed in the sarcophagus at once without any further ceremonial. The leather casing was sealed and then the massive cover of the porphyry sarcophagus was lowered into place by the use of a derrick.

Henry Holden Scheen, of the Lee Rifles, of Virginia, called on General Dodge to-night and stated that besides the Rifles, Virginia will be represented at the dedication of the monument by two colored battalions of the First and Second Virginia Volunteers, and the Richmond Light Infantry Blues, Major Sol. Cutchins, one of the oldest organizations in the country, having been started in 1798. They will leave Richmond Saturday night and will arrive here Sunday morning. His health permitting, Governor O'Ferrall, of Virginia, will come, under escort of the Richmond Blues.

Grand Marshal Dodge to day sent a special invitation to Colonel John S Mosby, requesting him to serve on the grand marshal staff

KENTUCKY'S LEGISLATURE.

Hunter, the Republican Nominee for U. S. Senator, Indicted for Conspiracy to Bribe.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

FRANKFORT, KY., April 17.—The Franklin county grand jury has returned true bills against Dr. W. Godfrey Hunter, the Republican nominee for the U. S. Senate, ex-Congressman John Henry Wilson, of the Eleventh district, Capt. Noel Gaines and his brother-in-law, Thomas Tanner, of Frankfort. Those named have been indicted for conspiracy to bribe. All are Republicans with the exception of Gaines and Tanner. The indictments were filed in court at 10 30 o'clock.

The news at once became public and created the greatest indignation among the Republicans, all of whom denounced it as a conspiracy among the Frankfort Democrats to defeat and humiliate Hunter. They claimed that the indictments against Gaines and Tanner, the Democrats, were returned simply as "savers" to prevent the public generally from gaining the impression that the grand jury had been made an engine of political persecution, and that they would be dismissed at the first hearing on account of insufficient evidence.

According to previous agreement a formal ballot was taken to-day, and one vote was cast for each of the candidates —Hunter, Blackburn, Martin, Boyle and Stone. It is not believed here that the indictments will force Hunter to withdraw.

The bolting Republicans, however, are gleeful and are urging a call for another caucus.

PRINCESS CHIMAY.

The Secret of Her Withdrawal from Paris.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

LONDON, April 17.—A dispatch to the Times from Paris says that the secret of the withdrawal of the Princess Chimay, nee Ward, of Detroit, from the Folies Bergere, is found in the fact that friends of the family had resolved to place her children in the front row of the theatre. A crowd of the Belgian friends of Prince Chimay had arranged to come from Charleroi. They were to simultaneously raise the cry of "to the madhouse." Some of the Belgian friends of the Prince proposed to provoke a duel with Rigo. This challenge, the champion of Princess Chimay need not, of course, have accepted, nevertheless the tragic side of her adventure, the correspondent of the Times concludes, may have been nearer than was generally supposed.

THE FLOOD DISTRICT.

A DISASTROUS BREAK IN THE LOUISIANA LEVEES.

A Crevasse Nearly a Mile Wide—Town of Delta Under Water—Crops Destroyed in Several Parishes—The Loss Will be Enormous.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., April 17.—Gov. Jones to-day received a telegram from his private secretary, who is distributing funds in the flooded district, stating that a most deplorable state of affairs exists in Monroe county. He estimates that there are 9,000 people and 1,000 head of stock in that county in need of immediate assistance to prevent stravation. This estimate, he says, is conservative. The people have been temporarily relieved by the Memphis and Little Rock relief committees, but the stock is dying for want of food. No crops were made there last year on account of the drought and there is no feed in the county.

VICKSBURG, MISS., April 17.—The crevasse in the Biggs levee, La., about six miles below this city, was 1,700 feet wide at last reports and rapidly widening. The water is rushing through with a roar like Niagara and all day long refugees have been fleeing to this city with their stock and other property. The water was fifteen feet deep against the levee when it broke and the men who were on the spot say that it poured through in vast circular masses or whirlpools twenty feet high. A large part of Madison, Tensas, Catahoula and Concordia parishes were overflowed by it and the resulting distress will be very great. The number of refugees in the city has been largely increased and they are coming on every boat. The water flooded the Vicksburg, Shreveport & Pacific Railroad in a few hours and the trains west of this place are abandoned in consequence. The town of Delta is overflowed deeply, and planters say that the water will back up to Mellekin's bend, sixteen miles north. Three white persons, two men and a woman, passed twelve hours in the midst of the fury of the crevasse, perched in a tree. The water roused them from their beds and they had only time to seek safety in its boughs when the mighty flood was upon them. They made their presence known by pistol shots during the night and several attempts to rescue them were made, but it was not until 10 a. m., when an adventurous crew from the Government steamer Etta Ethridge, Mate John Birdwell and Deckhands Frank Goodrich and Henry Hubbard, the two latter colored, put out in a yawl and rescued them. No further disasters have occurred, and the crevasse is thought to have relieved the situation of its worst features. The river is falling here. The levee engineers will now endeavor to save the remaining levees, a task which is very hopeful at this time.

VICKSBURG MISS., April 17.—Midnight.—An official report says the crevasse at Biggs, four miles from Delta, La., is nearly a mile wide at this hour and the roaring torrent is spreading over the lowlands of Madison parish with startling rapidity.

This is unquestionably the most destructive break that has yet occurred, and the loss to property and live stock will be enormous. Madison, Tensas and Concordia parishes will be inundated, while the fine farms of Franklin and Catahoula parishes are in imminent danger. The fertile lands of these parishes have been prepared for this year's crop, and in many instances cultivation is well underway.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Dissensions of the Democratic Caucus Displayed—Much Feeling Manifested by the Two Factions.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The dissensions of the recent Democratic caucus were brought into the House to-day and were threshed over again to the evident edification of the Republicans. Mr. Bailey, of Texas, produced a newspaper article accusing him of wearing Mr. Reed's collar and of acting under Mr. Reed's suggestion in acquiescing in the Republican policy of inaction. Denouncing the statement as a lie, Mr. Bailey repeated the reasons for his course heretofore given by him.

Mr. Dearmond, of Missouri, in reply to Mr. Bailey, declared that the verdict of the caucus had been an endorsement of his policy of fighting the Republicans at all points.

Mr. Burke, of Texas, offered a personal explanation similar to that made by Mr. Bailey.

The expected alignment of the Democrats by a vote on Mr. Dingley's motion to adjourn until Wednesday, was averted because all of the Democrats opposed the motion on account of Mr. Dingley's refusal to yield for the consideration of a resolution of inquiry concerning the policy of the Government in the Union Pacific foreclosure suits, which Mr. Bland, of Missouri, vainly attempted to bring up. Much feeling was displayed by the two Democratic factions, and after the House had adjourned, fruitless attempts were made to have their troubles considered in another caucus.
